

Right Arm Paralyzed!

Saved from St. Vitus Dance.

"Our daughter, Blanche, now fitteen years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. We feared St. Vitus dance, and tried the best physicians, with no benefit. She has taken three bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine and has gained 31 pounds. Her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid."

WHAT TO WEAR,

The collars on almost all dresses remain high and close, an exceptionally uncomfortable fashion for hot weather, but one which seems to obtain in all styles of dress except those for strictly styles of dress except those for strictly house or evening wear.

The circular rain cape is a very comfortable garment for driving or for walking, and is, as its name indicates, cut in one piece. The collar will turn up or down, and the front is fastened by three trans. It can easily be made large to straps. It can easily be made long to cover the dress, or can be rendered more ornamental with upper capes.

Those who do not approve of or can-not wear the decollette style of dress need not now be troubled, for that gen-tle genius. La Duse, suggests that a veiled throat and bust may charmingly fulfill the requirements of evening dress. In fact, most all of the newest and swellest of evening costumes are "fulled in" with chifton or crepe and inished at the neck with the modish velvet throat band now in vogue.

One of the neatest and most graceful overskirt models used this season shows the left side raised toward the back, the lifted portion held by a handsome buckle. This part then falls in a broad box-plait, not stiffened at all, but in a natural, easy fold. The front and right side are perfectly plain. The under-dress, or simulated one, shows only at the left side beneath the box-plait. The back of the overdress is exceedincly full and just escapes the ground. Four yards of double-width material are used for this overskirt.

The present season is a popular one for ostrich feathers, the number worn on stylish hats being very great. Black plunes are arranged among colored trimmings of every sort on fashionable hats, whatever the shape may be. A lady well known in society is just now wearing a picture hat of tan-colored straw with three large feathers arranged to droop over the brim, two of a similar length curling over the brim in the back above the hair, and no less than ten half-length plumes disposed in various positions round the crown. Many of the tips are wired in order to make them retain an erect position, but quite as many droop in a natural direction.

High coiffures are to predominate at evening functions.
Flowers, ribbons, aigrettesand jeweled novelties will serve as garnitures.
The "Calve" and "Carmen" comb in tortoiseshell will be especially favored by tall women and those of middle height, to whom it lends a stately air.
The French caprice of forming the lair into an Alsatian bow will have many followers upon this side.
For a slender face and neck the hair may be loosely waved, twisted low down at the back of the head and some Greek curls clustered about neck and shoulders—a youthful mode, but to certain zirls undeniably becoming.
A matronly coiffure is the "Revale." This requires a luxuriant suit of hair. The tresses are waved and drawn up high on the head, where they are braided into a thick braid, which is laid into a crown.

The Deadly Consecticut Woman.

Turner's Falls Reperter.

A woman shot herself in Connecticut a day or two says and papers told us all about it in poster type headlines. But the text informs us that "she, it is said, was engaged in cleaning her arms when one of them went oft." If this is the kind of women they have in Connecticut a man's life is never ease, to say nothing of the liability to self-destruction. Picture the dread, if you can, of a man with a pretty woman's arms a man with a pretty woman's arms about his neck, momentarily expecting one of them to go off and blow his best brains all over the parlor funiture.

A simple gift to give a young house-keeper is a standard cook book, a book on chafing-dish cookers, or a blank book for recipes with pencils attached. Cover any of these with a book cover of sage green or brown linen and decorate them with some painted design or quaint lettering done in soher shades and touched up with gold paint.

The peach is the pencils favorite.

The peach is the popular favorite now. It is said to be a tonic, an aperiout, a food and a drink combined; or, as a lady who is trying them puts it, "they are both meat and medicine." This is certainly good news, just as peaches are getting plenty. It is said they are good for the complexion, good for the blood and good for the digestion; you may eat them when you please—at night or in the morning, or in the middle of the day—but they must be ripe and must not be stale.

Among several articles recently patented is a water-cooler which does not require ice. It is a covered receptacie of cellular brickware, manufactured clay, sawdust and sabestos fibra. In the process the sawdust is burned out, leaving the product cellular or porous. The receptacle, with the water to be kept cool within stands in a tray of galvanized iron, which holds water to a depth of two or three inches. By reason of the poresity of the cooler and the forces of capillary attraction, the water in the tray constantly rises through the cellular walls of the receptacle, and is as constantly evaporated, thereby keeping the water inside as thereby keeping the water inside as cool as it is usually drawn from a well or spring.

Raspberry cream is a delicious dessert that is seasonable. Put a pint of carefully picked over berries in a bowl for an hour, with an ounce of powdered sugar, then pass them through a fine sleve. Put an ounce of gelatine, which has previously been seaked in two tablespoonfuls of milk, into a saucepan, with a gill of hot milk, add two ounces of sifted sugar, and stir until the ingredients are melted; then cool and add to it the raspberries, with half a pint of whipped cream slightly sweetened and flavored with a dash of maraschine or brandy. Whisk all lightly together and pour into an open mould. Before serving up fill the centre with raspberries which have been allowed to stand for a little while in a dish, with a little kirsch or other liquor and sugar. or other liquor and sugar.

A sea of the Prophet.

Brigham Young, of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is supposed to be a descendant of the famous Mormon apoetle, was locked up in the Third precinct police station, Jersey City, for making overtures to Jersey City young women. Policeman Wohlben caught Young in the act at night on the Mountain road, Every woman to whom he spoke spurned him, but he renewed his importunities as soon as the next one met him. Wohlben arrested him. The prisoner said he had been drinking, and was looking for a wife. He declared that he came from Salt Lake City and was one of the Latter Day Saints. When asked how many wives he had he smiled and replied that he could not remember them all. He said that he was expelled from the Mormon society because he preferred rum to religion. He is eaventy-five years old, but is tall and stalwart. He has a florid complexion and wears a full, white beard.

The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular.
